Discover the Egadi Islands

The Egadi Islands Archipelago, made up of the islands of Favignana, Levanzo, and Marettimo (as well as the rocks of Maraone and Formica) is located just 5 nautical miles from Trapani and boasts the largest protected marine area in Europe.

The sea of the Egadi Islands, due to its particular hydrodynamic conditions, is among the cleanest and clearest in the Mediterranean. Its seabeds are characterized by meadows of oceanic posidonia that extend also to very high depths (30/40 meters) and form a precious ecosystem, ideal for the reproduction of numerous fish species. The characteristics of the archipelago make this destination very popular for all sea lovers and enthusiasts of diving and sailing. The predominant wind is the Grecale, blowing from the north/east, which lets us say that in the Egadi Islands, we always tack!

FAVIGNANA

It is the largest island of the Aegadian Islands and also the most populated. The island has a characteristic butterfly shape and its name comes from "Favonius", the Roman god of hot and dry winds. Located about 9 miles from Trapani, the island has beautiful beaches (Cala Rossa being the most famous) and stunning untouched coves. Not to be missed are the sea caves, reachable by boat, such as the Grotta dei Sospiri. Favignana boasts the only active tuna fishery in the Mediterranean for commercial purposes, and also houses the historic Florio establishment which is now a beautiful archaeological museum, where the equipment used for tuna fishing is kept, along with workshops, boat sheds and ovens for cooking the tuna.

LEVANZO

The Genovese Cave, with its prehistoric graffiti, is one of the most popular attractions on the island of Levanzo. The coast is very jagged and offers secluded coves and beaches, sometimes difficult to reach. Unlike Favignana, there are no sandy beaches and the best way to explore them all is by boat.

MARETTIMO

It is an uncontaminated island, the wildest and most distant from the Sicilian coast. Here you will not find equipped beaches with beach resorts, umbrellas and bars (unlike Favignana). In fact, Marettimo is a completely different island from the others: mountainous, very green and, in addition to being the realm of scuba divers, it is a paradise for trekking enthusiasts.
